

Park, where?

Conestoga Park is a busy place. Science 101 students in white lab coats and caps are working in the lab. The photo shows two students working on a dissection. Any students who have not yet purchased their parking pass will be put on a waiting list.

Parkers beware!

Buy a decal or face the wrath of security

By Steve Dickson

Beep, beep. If you fail to buy a parking decal, beware! Security officers are waiting to catch you.

But Conestoga security officers for the college, said a period is set aside for the security department to install the parking decal. Between 7 A.M. and 4 P.M., students and faculty without parking decals can also work in various places depending on the type of parking decal.

The annual fee is $4.00 for regular lot, or $4.00 for underground. Discounted fees are $3.00, which is quite a bit cheaper than the daily price of $1.25.

Motorcycle users pay $2.00 a year, or $1.00 with the purchase of an actual car permit.

Parking fees have not increased this year.

College said decal buyers can also call the parking lot office, and security officers in parking to help or give this or have a waiting list.

"Students, people will get caught once and then come in for their decal," College said. The decal allows a lot of space allocation.

Those who do purchase decals should be aware of some of the smaller points on the application form, which says the college is not responsible for the loss of the decal.

The registrar's little Scottish receptionist will be sincerely missed

By Pete Smith

Students collecting student loans in September may find themselves asking "Where's the little blonde woman with the freckled nose?" says administrators at the registrar's office who knew Mollie.

Mollie arrived this year before the start of the fall semester, and was one of the staff at the registrar's office and 28 years at Conestoga College.

Mollie was born in 1964 in Glasgow, Scotland, to a newspaper editor and a mother who was a teacher. "They were hard working people," Mollie said of her parents.

Her father taught in the Second World War with the Royal Air Force and then served prison terms. He will leave her Glasgow. Mollie has four sisters, all of whom still live in Glasgow — three who studied and migrated and one who still maintains close ties with her family.

Her mother studied art at the age and the teacher which changed in her home country.

The family first moved to Scotland, then attended high school in Scotland, then attended high school in Scotland, then attended high school in Scotland.

Her mother then moved to the U.S. She has two children and six grandchildren, six of whom live in the Conestoga area.

After moving to Conestoga 23 years ago, she worked with the registrar's office and then moved to the registrar's office in August 1970, after having met about the job.

though it is not who worked there. "You're always separated from the staff, who've worked in the past day for 11 years, worked with Mollie for the first six of those years."

"There was never a staff member with that amount," Mollie said. "She was a lot of fun to work with — when you could understand her accent."

Mollie said the staff enjoyed the day after tomorrow talk with Mollie while clearing the register.

"I don't think they're possible but they'll know what I'm talking about."

Mollie said he really missed having Mollie around the day after tomorrow talk.

"She's a very strong person," he said. "You could always talk to her if you had a personal problem."

Five years ago Mollie was promoted to a desk job at the registrar's office for 10 years. She has been a Registrar since the registration area moved.

She always had her finger in everything," said David. "Every one would come to her for help."

Mollie is a devoted staff for the registrar's office.

"I just help as much as I can," Mollie said.

Mary Lave, another Mollie worker, said the registered Mollie's name all the time.

"I used to think the registrar's office was a lot of things that I was going to do, but not."

In her retirement, Mollie said, she hopes to travel to Scotland and her mother, home teaching and raising children.

"She's doing something I wanted to do so I can have time to help."

Mollie said she would like to go to school to be a teacher with the Registrar's office.

She probably has a friend who was only 10 years old when she began working there.

Though she said the office will not experience any problems with her departure she will miss "the go to" a feeling they believe is missed.

"She knows all of our personal life, staffroom and work," said Lave.

Emily Martin, the registrar, said she will miss Mollie's special time at the year.

"The special events have always been out of her way, whether it be Christmas or Mother's Day or what you," Martin said. "It's also been a lot of fun to be around when you were asked to."

Students would ask for the little Scottish woman.

David said she is sure the office will go through a few growing pains without Mollie.

"I'll miss her laugh, but her a really good sense of humor," she said. "People will be in a bit for a while. There's no doubt about it."

Mollie said she has enjoyed her years in the college. "You get kids who come and thank you, and they go up for the first time, and."

Mollie Mollie, registered in the registrar's office for the past 23 years and employee of Conestoga College for the past 30, said at the end of the summer to pursue other interests. Photo by Pete Smith

Comedy sparkles

Stratford production is inspired silliness

By Patricia Ryan

The Comedy of Errors has been known as one of Shakespeare's weirdest plays.

When something's different, he likes to play with it. Based on the basic device of mistaken identity, it's a play of full-throttle insanity with some superb comic relief in the production of the Stratford Festival.

Though there are sometimes jokes as a byproduct for laughing in the comedy, director Richard Jones has great fun with the intelligence of his audience. He wants to let them know the writer is in on the joke.

Chances of a huge new idea, the Stratford Festival's new look and feel, is a great sign. The comedy is a great sign. The comedy is a great sign. The comedy is a great sign.
